

So Now What?

If you are already regularly attending worship and the Wednesday Night Gathering, as well as taking an active part in a small group and some type of service in the Church, then you very well may be ready to take the next step of "Service in the World."

All that's left is to make sure that you feel called to step forward and take the next step. Consider some of the projects that we are affiliated with and discern where you feel God leading you to serve. Then, get involved and know that your service is slowly but steadily changing the world

If you have any questions or want help discerning God's calling, then we're more than pleased to help you take this step.

So You Want to Change the World?

We want to change the world, too, and we have some very specific ideas about how to do it. Whether you knew it or not, you've already been doing it as you have persevered on the path of discipleship. Change starts with ourselves.

But, once we are becoming better disciples of Jesus, then we are called to go out and serve the world as Jesus was a servant. After all, if Jesus could wash the feet of his disciples, then surely we're not too good to serve others in a similar way.

At FBC Danville, we financially support international mission work and service projects. Within our own community, however, we feel called to be servants—to be a part of the solution. So, we are affiliated with several local and regional service projects where we feel that we can have an impact, meet the needs of people we're learning to love, and have a significant impact on our own discipleship.

Our invitation to you is to pick one of these projects and become involved in a regular way. All too often, our involvement in missions is so irregular and spontaneous that we miss the opportunity for missions to form us as Christians and people. So, we encourage people who are becoming disciples to find ways to regularly be involved in these projects.
